Stephen Blair is part-time visiting lecturer at Wake Forest, finishing up a Princeton doctoral dissertation on the fragments of early Roman historiography and epic.

His work is focused on Roman literature about the past and what makes people want to describe themselves as living in an “age of decline”. His other interests include lyric poetry, pastoral, reception of the Classical tradition and playing the mandolin.